RESUMEN

Estudié Psicología y Ciencias de la Educación en la Universidad de Lieja (Bélgica) y me licencié en 1996 con la máxima distinción (nota media del último curso > 90%). A continuación realicé estudios de doctorado en la Universidad de Cardiff bajo la supervisión del profesor Dylan Jones, y obtuve mi doctorado en 2000. Tras un año más en Cardiff como investigador postdoctoral, fui contratado como profesor con contrato indefinido en la Universidad de Plymouth (Reino Unido), ascendiendo posteriormente a Senior Lecturer y a Reader (reconocido por la ANECA como el equivalente a un «Catedrático» en el sistema académico español). Mientras trabajaba en la Universidad de Plymouth, completé un curso de postgrado sobre Aprendizaje y Enseñanza en la Educación Superior. En 2008, me incorporé al Departamento de Psicología de la Universidad de las Islas Baleares como becario Ramón y Cajal. En 2013 pasé a ser «profesor contratado doctor interino» antes de ser titular en diciembre de 2015 como «profesor contratado doctor» y convertirme en «Catedrático de Universidad» el 5 de octubre de 2016.

Soy autor de 238 contribuciones científicas, incluidos 76 artículos JCR revisados por pares en el campo de la psicología experimental (memoria a corto plazo y atención) publicados en revistas de alto factor de impacto (el 47% de mis artículos están publicados en revistas Q1, el 36% en revistas Q2). Mi índice h es de 29 según Scopus (36 según Google Scholar). Me han concedido un total de 20 proyectos de investigación competitivos del Reino Unido, Australia, Suecia, Portugal y España, por un importe total estimado de más de 2,5 millones de euros.

Mi experiencia docente incluye docencia de grado y posgrado en los campos de la psicología cognitiva, la percepción, la atención y los métodos de investigación.
